The desire of the residents of Syracuse and Oswego for a route between the two cities that would avoid omnibus transfers and the uncertainty of connections with the New York Central & Hudson River R. R., and the West Shore R. R., and afford better facilities and quicker transit was so forcibly expressed during 1885, that it attracted the attention of the management of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg R. R., and together with the commercial importance of such a new route, resulted in the formation of the "Phoenix Line." The Phoenix Line was opened for business September 7, 1885, and its opening was hailed with delight by the residents along its route. The new line meets all its requirements. It positively avoids all transfers connecting with the West Shore R. R. and N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. at Syracuse, and with the main line of the R. W. & O. R. R. at Oswego with 3 stations in Oswego (two on the east and one on the west side of the city,) 2 stations in Fulton (at which place omnibus transfer is also avoided,) and 2 stations in Syracuse, all of which are located in convenient and central spots, making the new line easily accessible and convenient for the people. Luxurious twelve wheel easy riding coaches, with large windows, are run on all trains between the two cities. As a scenic route the line is attractive, traversing a fertile farming country, and running along the east shore in full view of Onondaga Lake. At Three River Point, while crossing the Oneida River, a view is obtained of the confluence of the Oneida, Oswego and Seneca Rivers; thence along the east bank of the Oswego River and Canal. At Oswego, while crossing the River, a fine view is obtained of the entire harbor and shipping interests of the City of Oswego, and also of Lake Ontario.
